

CASSIE THORNTON

@ Normal Space

Thursday 20 March 2008, 8pm

In the sunless winter of rural Finland, Cassie Thornton embarked on a quest for personal corporate acknowledgment and support. After her laptop broke, she opened renegade Apple franchises in abandoned forest real estate -- capitalizing on the underwhelmed cultural landscape of the Scandinavian forest. This March, in the gallery/bedroom of artist Nick Normal, witness the conclusion of Thornton's audio/visual journey with the grand opening of a commemorative five foot version of the technomiraculous 5th Avenue Apple store, and the unveiling of an earth-shattering technology that hopes to revolutionize all other Apple products.

Please bring your iPod.

Please join us at 8pm on Thursday 20 March 2008 for the public opening. Then the exhibition will be viewable for three weeks by appointment. Please visit the Normal Space blog for directions and contact details.

Normal Space is an alternative exhibition space inside the studio of artist Nick Normal, currently housed at the Flux Factory in Long Island City, Queens.
